This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

THE Cambridge Antiquarian Society decided, in 1894, to commence the publication of "The Proctors' Accounts and Inventories, the Grace Books, and other documents relating to the early history of the University," in commemoration of Henry Richards Luard, D.D., Fellow of Trinity College, and Registrary of the University from 1862 to 1891. The publication of a series of volumes containing the above-mentioned documents appeared to be specially appropriate, because, apart from their interest and value, it was well known that Dr Luard was most anxious to see them in print. In fact, he would in all probability have edited them himself, had not the time which he could spare from his official duties been fully occupied, during the best years of his life, by the production of a series of historical works which he felt it to be his duty not to interrupt; and had not failing health, when they were completed, prevented him from engaging in any fresh occupation.

The "Luard Memorial Series" having been settled, it was obvious that it must begin with the earliest Grace Book. I was directed, as editor, to supply in the first place a complete and accurate text; secondly, a full and careful index; thirdly, an introduction. The text I have supplied in an expanded form. Doubtful readings or expansions are marked with an asterisk: an obelus denotes a certain reading, which is ungrammatical, or otherwise questionable. I am personally responsible for every reading and expansion printed: but I am much indebted to Mr Rogers, of the University Library, for the careful and accurate transcript which he prepared for the Antiquarian Society. This transcript has materially lightened my labours. In the index I have endeavoured to note every name, grace, and degree recorded in the Register. Sometimes it has been possible to follow a name through a series of University acts, in which case the several stages have been recorded under one title. More often it has been thought safer to give the several entries separately, and leave the task of identification to those who use this book. Instead of following in the index all the various eccentricities of spelling which appear in the original, I have as a rule indexed the entries under the form of spelling most familiar to modern readers. Thus Robbynson will be found under Robinson. I am aware of the dangers of this plan, but it seemed to me on the whole the most convenient and least cumbrous method. I have also included in the index all facts of University History which seemed to me worthy of note: but I have not indexed all the occasions on which, for instance, a new bell-rope was bought. I have also glossarized in the index a few expressions which might be unfamiliar to the ordinary reader. I have done my best, by cross-references and otherwise, to make the index as useful as possible.

In the Introduction I have confined myself to explanations and summaries strictly bearing on the matter of the book. I have attempted as far as possible to elucidate the text, but I have not, for obvious reasons, attempted a learned disquisition on the history of the University.

In conclusion, I feel that some explanation, and perhaps some apology, is needed for the delay in completing my task. I received my marching orders in the Lent Term of 1895. Up to that date the promises of support had not been considered sufficient by the Committee. The Long Vacations of 1895 and 1896 were not available for private and personal reasons. This then is the work of the shorter vacations of two years, and of such little leisure as I could find during term. If the result seems inadequate, I can only ask for the indulgence of subscribers, which I hope may be extended to me not only in this but in all other matters.

My thanks are due to the members of the Committee, and in particular to the Registrary, and Dr M. R. James, for kind assistance received.

Registra Procuratorum 1454—1488	1—221
Diary of John Meers, Esquire Bedel 1533–4	221—230
Index	232—276

INTRODUCTION.

THIS Book has been known in the Registry for a long time as Grace Book A. Its proper title is Registra Procuratorum, 1454—1488. A note of its purchase for the sum of 2/- may be seen on page 2, below. It is a quarto book of about 175 paper folios, some of which are blank: others have been used for the insertion of extraneous matter. One such entry, the diary of John Meers, Esquire Bedel, for the year 1533—4, has been thought to be of sufficient interest to be printed in the text. The binding is not original. The latter part of the book has been much disarranged in the binding. I have endeavoured to restore the proper order in printing. The water-marks indicate that folios 143—151 have been displaced. The water-mark on these folios is different from that of the chief part of the book, but the same as that of the blank pages at the end. I have no reason to believe that anything has been bound in the book which does not belong to it. On the other hand several folios have been cut out, and others have been torn or damaged. The Book.

The writing varies from year to year: there are very few entries that suggest the work of the professional scribe. On the other hand this is clearly the official book, and not a book for rough notes. This is proved among other things by the elaborate certificates of audit inserted on folios 93 and 112.

The book should contain for each year: (1) an account of receipts, (2) an account of expenditure, (3) a list of graces passed. The list of cautions required to be kept in duplicate by the proctors by the statute passed 22 June, 1456 (Statuta Antiqua 59)[1], is sometimes copied into it, and in later years this was the regular practice. Its contents.

[1] Documents. University and Colleges of Cambridge. Printed for the Universities Commission, 1852, Vol. I. p. 343. Hereafter quoted thus, 'Doc. p. 343.'

Occasionally a new statute is entered; and sometimes a letter or some other memorandum.

The nature of the expenditure will be readily seen by the inspection of the Register itself. The most interesting items are those connected with the University Buildings (see below). Journeys are another cause of frequent expenditure. Some of the more interesting of these are noticed elsewhere.

Communae. Their nature.

The receipts consist in part of communae paid on the occasion of various acts. The communa paid on admission to the question was 12^d, on admission to the degree of master in grammar 12^d, on other occasions usually 20^d. The communa is the price of a week's commons. Stat. Ant. 113 lays down that every person proceeding to a Bachelor's degree shall pay his communa: that the communa should be paid on admission to incept is taken for granted. At Oxford the Bachelor only paid half a communa[1]. The bursa at the University of Paris was the same thing, but there the University took the payment of two or three weeks[2]. Those admitted to the two lowest degrees were probably supposed to pay for commons at a lower rate. Exceptionally high communae, e.g. that of Bishop Roos, p. 26, are probably due to the fact that those paying them, being of higher rank, spent more on their weekly commons. At Paris those proceeding to degrees were bound to state on oath the actual amount of their bursa. It may be conjectured that the word communa was originally applied to the society, whether college or hostel, to which the student belonged. In this society he was said solvere communam suam, and thus the word communa came to be transferred from the club to the club subscription.

Fines and Cautions.

More lucrative were the fines. On admission to a degree students were bound to deposit a 'caution' or pledge that they would proceed to perform the requisite acts: questionists, that they would 'determine': inceptors that they would actually commence, and incept within a fixed period. The questionist's caution was worth 13/4; the inceptor's 20/-, p. 179, or 40/-, p. 148. These cautions were forfeited if the student did not perform the stipulated exercises. Still more valuable was the fine for not feasting the Regents, exacted from inceptors in the higher faculties. The mendicant friars usually preferred to pay the fine, which was for them eight marks, for religiosi possessionati or proprietarii, ten marks. The entry therefore pro non convivando regentes implies admission to incept in a faculty higher than that of Arts. In 1458 all these fines and others carefully set forth were devoted to the expenses of the new schools (below, p. 13).

Graces.

The graces relate to exemptions granted to members of the University dispensing them from various Academical requirements. They are in the strictest sense 'graces' of the University, acts of favour. They are some guide as to the nature of University requirements during this period, but I suspect that more degrees were 'gratiosi' than 'rigorosi' in the fifteenth century, at any rate in the higher faculties. On the other hand many of the graces are granted to persons, who have carried on their studies in other universities. I believe it to be an accident if a statute properly so called is entered in the Grace Book; new statutes were registered in the Proctors' books of Statutes. And I am not sure that the term grace belongs in this period to any resolution of the Congregation, which was not a privilegium passed for the benefit of a particular person. The grace for the Bedels, p. 185, is, it is true, something between a grace and a statute.

Lists of Cautions.

The cautions, of which we sometimes have a list, are deposited by the Proctors in accordance with Stat. Ant. 59 in a chest with three keys, one held by the Chancellor, or Vice-Chancellor, the other two by the two Proctors. This would be the chest mentioned on p. 7. It was the duty of the Stationary, or Stationaries of the University, to value the books offered as security. If the caution was forfeited, it was handed over to the Stationary to sell. Much laxity seems to have prevailed in exacting the proper payments from the Stationaries. Gerard Wake, p. 135, died heavily in debt to the University. The lists of cautions are useful as checking the entries of the names of those admitted to degrees. They may also be thought of interest as shewing the nature of the books in possession of the students at the University at this time. Frequently the cautions consisted of plate, or articles of dress; sometimes of money wrapped up in a napkin, or in a purse. The following is the list of books deposited as caution 1454—1488:

General character of the cautions.

The literature, it will be seen, is almost entirely professional. Belles Lettres are represented by two copies of Virgil, and a work or two of Seneca. Most common among deposits are Service books of various kinds. Then come copies of the Bible. Among writers on theology and philosophy, Thomas Aquinas comes first, and Scotus second. Texts of Aristotle are hardly so common as might be expected. Copies of the Sentences are not so common as copies of the Canon Law, or even of the Civil Law. Compendiums of various kinds abound. Astrology has one representative. The list of books reflects fairly well the relative popularity of the various higher studies. If Bibles and Service books be excluded from the reckoning, it will be seen that Theology yields slightly in vogue to the more profitable study of the Canon Law. On the other hand, works of Canon Law are more common than treatises on the Civil Law, and even among these latter it is probable that many copies of Digest and Code were owned by students of Civil Law. Works on Medicine are few and far between. In the lower studies there is a remarkable paucity of works: a few works on Logic and Grammar seem to be all that represent these studies. Probably the books used by students in Grammar and Arts were too cheap, and perhaps too much worn, to be received as pledges.

Among other objects deposited may be noted an astrolabe, p. 182, and, p. 207, unum le nutte cum coopertorio, perhaps a cocoa-nut set in silver. The exact nature of the murra, a kind of precious cup, so frequently pledged, appears to be still in doubt[1]: but on page 150 we have a murra, totaliter de argento, et eleganter deaurata. The benda murre deaurata (p. 168) may just possibly be a band of murrey colour, ornamented with gold.

History of the period covered.

The period, 1454–1488, covered by this book is full of striking events. The book was started during the illness of Henry VI., and the first Protectorate of Richard Duke of York. We have on p. 2 a procession for the recovery of the king. The battles of S. Albans, Bloreheath, Northampton and Wakefield seem to have left the University unmoved, but with the accession of the new king it was thought desirable to secure the protection of the new powers. The procession on p. 24 for the king's welfare shews that the scholars were anxious to please. Moreover Mr Scrope was sent to London to see the Chancellor of England and the Earl of Warwick (p. 27), and the effects of his intercession may be seen in the safeguard for the University mentioned on pp. 28, 38, and the confirmation of their privileges p. 38. Soon after his accession the king visited Cambridge twice, 1461–2, p. 34, and 1463–4, p. 43. The procession for the king and the realm early in the year 1469 (p. 80) seems to shew that a presentiment of danger was felt even in Cambridge, a feeling that was justified by the later events of the same and the following year. I cannot explain the entry on p. 116 of expenses for the mass of Queen Eleanor.

Will of Sir J. Fostalfe.

It is difficult to discover on what grounds the University took interest in the administration of the estate of Sir John Fostalfe, who died about the end of 1459. The proctor appears even to have hoped to be made chief executor (p. 24). But the will as given in the Paston Letters does not suggest that the University could in any way benefit under Sir John's dispositions (p. 185). A college of secular priests was to be founded at Caistor, and perhaps the scholars hoped that some of their number might be elected to this foundation. The executors mentioned on p. 24 are Sir John Paston and William Yelverton, Justice.

The Earl of Worcester.

If the University had been so unfortunate as to offend John Tiptoft, Earl of Worcester, we need not be surprised that the scholars were willing to pay five marks (p. 48) to be reconciled with him. But perhaps there is another explanation of this obscure transaction. The Earl was executed on the 18th of October, 1470, and we find about that time (p. 84) that a difficulty had arisen about some books that the Earl had given to the University.

When Edward had been firmly reestablished on the throne we find a solemn proclamation of the privileges of the University, p. 95, which may indicate that they had been called in question during the unquiet times.

Privileges and Exemptions of the University.

We find another point of contact between the history of the University and that of the nation on p. 158. The University expect that a tenth will be granted by the Convocation of Canterbury, which was actually voted in April, 1481. They write therefore to their Chancellor, Thomas Rotheram, Archbishop of York, who is also Chancellor of England, to beg him to secure exemption for the benefices held by scholars of the University.

Just before we have a letter to the same, urging him to protect the University in the exercise of their privileges, which have been recently attacked by the town. The special privilege in question seems to be the jurisdiction of the University over the victuallers of the town. In the matters of forestalling, of unjust weights and measures, and of victuals unfit for food, the University had jurisdiction and the general right to see that the law was carried out. On p. 7 it may be seen that the proctors destroyed bad herrings exposed for sale. For breaches of the law the University exacted fines, and they also exacted fees from the purveyors on various pretexts. There need be no doubt that the protection of the Chancellor on this occasion was not invoked in vain.

Richard of Gloucester and the University.

The University were persuaded and not without reason that they had a powerful friend and protector in Richard Duke of Gloucester. In 1475–6 the duke made them a present of twenty marks. In the year 1480–1 William Thomson, Proctor, journeyed to the duke; one of the matters under discussion would no doubt be the grant of special prayers at St Paul's Cross mentioned in the letter on p. 159. On p. 169 we find a procession ordered at the time when the duke was in Scotland. This was the expedition of 1482, when Berwick was ceded to England.

On the 9th April, 1483, Edward IV. died. No mass or other function is recorded on this occasion, but some anxiety must have been felt in Cambridge, for a man had to be hired by the Vice-Chancellor (p. 170) to repress certain rumours that the men of the north were coming. The rumour was perhaps to the effect that the Duke of Gloucester was marching south with an army to seize the power. The letter on pp. 171—2 will belong to the short period of the Duke of Gloucester's protectorate. The University remind the Duke in English, which is much better than their Latin, of the acts by which he had marked his kindly affection towards them in the past. Archbishop Rotheram 'our heed and Chawnsler' had been involved in the fall of Hastings and the Queen's party. Together with Bishop Morton he was imprisoned, and the University write touchingly to secure the Protector's favour for him. He was shortly afterwards released, but never restored to his high office of Chancellor of England.

On the 20th of July, after Richard had assumed the crown, the University wrote to him again (p. 174) asking for his protection in the future as in the past, and recalling to his memory how they had endeavoured to serve him while there was yet no prospect of his succession to the throne.

Masses for Edward IV. or perhaps for Edward V., were celebrated in the latter part of 1483 (p. 185). The Parliament mentioned on the same page is that which met on the 23rd January, 1484. The visit of Richard III. to Cambridge on p. 186 took place on the 10th of March. The subsidy on p. 187 is the tenth granted by the Convocation of Canterbury, early in 1484. The fragment of accounts on pp. 198—9 is of doubtful date. But the mention of the service on king Richard's death (Aug. 22, 1485) and the note of 9 December 1485 which is entered on the same folio seem to shew that this is a fragment of the accounts of Butler and Urmston, the remainder of which has been lost. The accusation of heresy brought against the Vice-Chancellor, p. 224, reminds us that in 1533 England was in the full stress of the Ecclesiastical Revolution. I have not noticed any further allusion in the Register to events of public interest.

The University and the Town.

Reference is occasionally made to collisions between the University and the Town. We have no details about any of these disputes, the most important of which seems to be the quarrel above mentioned concerning the victuallers, which resulted in a suit-at-law (p. 153). But the chief interest of Meers' Diary for the years 1533–4 printed at the end of the volume lies in the picture it gives us of the relations between Town and Gown at a time of considerable friction. In 1502 a composition had been made between the University and the Town, which is printed on pp. 1 foll. of Lamb's Documents. But this composition does not seem to have produced complete accord, for on pp. 28 foll. of the same collection we have the articles of grievance which the borough urged against the University and presented to the Vice-Chancellor on the 11th of July, 1533. This is the 'lybell' to which reference is made on p. 221. It concerns the University jurisdiction in Sturbridge Fair, the fees taken by the proctors from those selling in the fair, for gauging, for marking measures, and on other excuses, the dues collected by the proctors on various kinds of merchandise entering the Town, the ordinary weekly court of the University, with jurisdiction in all cases to which a scholar was a party, the excommunication of Mr Slegg, late mayor (see p. 222), the alleged abuse of the University powers under the assizes of bread and beer, and other matters. The answers made by the Vice-Chancellor are set down against each article. On some points the fact is denied: on others the University rights are asserted. We may not be surprised that the mayor was not fully satisfied with his answer, and wished to have it in writing, for further consideration. But we do not find that the mayor and his fellows carried their points.

Oath of the peace. The dispute on pp. 225 following, about the Black Assembly, concerns the powers conferred upon the University by letters patent 10 Edward III. By this grant the mayor, the bailiffs, two aldermen, four burgesses, and two from every parish were forced to take an oath before the Chancellor to preserve the peace of the University and Town. The townsmen are only able to raise formal objections, that the scholars are not sworn in due manner, that the day appointed is not the customary day, and so forth: the powers of the University in this matter are too certain to be resisted. The ceremony of swearing in the College porters as constables, which takes place every year early in the October term, seems to be a relic of this ancient custom.

Tollbooth. The tollbooth mentioned on p. 213 is the town prison. The Vice-Chancellor had the right to use it for scholars and others whom he might wish to imprison, paying a fixed charge for its use. There were often difficulties between Town and University with regard to this right.

University Studies and Degrees. Little new light is thrown by these records on the system of University studies and degrees. On the other hand, the records themselves require to be supplemented from other sources before they become intelligible. The statutes of Oxford, and Cambridge, and the records of the University of Paris, are the most important aids. Much may be found that is useful in Peacock's Observations on the Statutes, where Stokys' diary in particular is at once interesting and disappointing, interesting because of the concrete picture it gives of University life, disappointing because after all it is only concerned with the details which interest a bedel, and throws no light on the real nature of the disputations and other acts to which allusion is made. Cooper's Annals supply much information. The learned works of Mr Mullinger and Mr Rashdall supply all that is needed on the general history of Universities, and Cambridge in particular: but do not descend to all the minute points with which these records deal. Hare's collection has little of much importance before the 16th century.

Matriculation. The proctors have little or nothing to do with the undergraduate before the first stage of his University career is ended. Matriculation as a University Act does not yet exist. The statute which requires every scholar to be entered under a certain master within 15 days of his coming into residence is probably still in force (Documents, p. 332, s. 42), and is no doubt satisfied if a student is entered on the books of a college or hostel. No fee of any kind is paid to the University by students before admission to the question.

Course in Arts.

To ascertain the studies which an undergraduate would pursue in arts we must turn to the Statutes. In a scheme presented at Oxford, 1426, Mun. Ac. Ox. p. 286, we find the following course, which is probably much the same ideal as that at which Cambridge aimed. Grammar is to be heard for one year, Priscian the author to be studied. Rhetoric occupies three terms, to be studied in Aristotle, or Boethius, or Tully: or, by example, in the poetry of Ovid or Virgil. Logic requires three terms, the περὶ ἑρμηνείας, the Topics of Boethius or Aristotle, or the Priora of Aristotle. Arithmetic and Music should each have one year, Geometry and Astronomy two. Boethius, Euclid, Vitellio, Ptolemy, are the masters. This completes the Trivium and Quadrivium, making up the seven liberal arts. The three philosophies, Natural, Moral and Metaphysical, will be studied in Aristotle's works, three terms for each. It is evidently contemplated that some of these studies should run concurrently; for the whole course before inception is not intended to last more than eight years. The Statutes for Cambridge of Edward VI. give the first year to Arithmetic, Geometry, and Astronomy, and as much cosmography as the student may succeed in assimilating. The second year is given to Logic; the third and fourth will add Philosophy. Another statute of earlier but uncertain date (Documents, p. 385) gives two years to Terence, and one year to Logic; Metaphysics and Natural Philosophy to be attended so far as they are lectured on. To all these studies we have only the slightest reference in these pages. Thus George de Vere, on account of his noble birth, is only to be obliged to hear his master lecture ordinarie once a week for his qualification, p. 14. This and an occasional allusion to lectura aularis, lectures delivered in a College, and lectura ordinaria, the public lectures of regent masters, make up all that we meet in this volume dealing with the preliminary studies in arts.

Requirements for

But it is clear that certain attendance at lectures was required before admission to the question. See pp. 134, 174. How far it was possible to secure that this attendance covered all the required arts and philosophies we can only guess. Statute 139 (Doc. p. 384) prescribes that no one should presume to answer the question before the end of his fourth year. Statute 135, p. 382, prescribes that the questionist shall have been generalis sophista for at least two years. This seems to involve attendance on the determiners in Lent to take part in their disputations. We have no knowledge of the evidence which was produced to shew that the conditions had been complied with: perhaps the corporale sacramentum of Stat. 139 was sufficient. At any rate the moment arrives when the generalis sophista is admitted to the question: and makes his first proof of membership of the University by paying 12*d.* as communa. Stokys' diary seems to shew that the question had become in the 16th century a very perfunctory affair. The father of the College acts as suus magister to all the questionists of the College, and asks them each in turn a question. If anything like a disputation takes place the bedel shall interrupt the father by 'knocking him out[1],' that is, by banging on the door so loudly that he could not be heard.

Once admitted to the question, the student was regarded as a commencing bachelor, but he was bound to determine within two years. Determination took place in Lent, and is described by the phrase 'stare in quadragesima.'

Determination in arts.

Stokys (Peacock, p. xiii) shews that admission to determine was preceded by an examination lasting over four days in the week before Shrove Sunday. In this examination all regent masters of arts can take part if they please. The first act of determination is a solemn function in which the father of the College and a selected bachelor of senior standing (the Tripos of later days) took part. After that the determiners stand in the schools every legible day for four weeks; each attended by one sophista with three questions of logic and philosophy; and the pair of them argue their questions against all comers. This continues until the Thursday after the fourth Sunday in Lent, from one o'clock till five every afternoon, every day except Saturday and holidays. The proceedings end with a solemn act, similar to the first. This concludes determination, and the first stage in the University career is reached. We should be glad to have more knowledge of the nature of these examinations and disputations, the kind of questions that the determiners propounded, and the manner in which they were argued: but all this is gone.

[1] Peacock, Observations &c. Appendix, p. vi.

It has been assumed, on the authority of statute 141 (Doc. p. 385), which has its parallel in other codes, that this act of determination could be performed by proxy. It was common certainly to incept for others, but this is not an exact parallel. The inceptor had to bear very heavy expenses of entertainment, and by incepting under the wing of another these expenses were escaped: one entertainment served for two. Again, instances can be quoted from this book in which acts were performed by proxy: thus, Bunwell has a grace to perform his acts after inception per se vel per alium, p. 44. Sermons may be preached by proxy, as in the case of Bernard, p. 72, and Wright, p. 105. Walter, p. 53, is allowed to preach once, and dispute once, personally or by proxy, after inception; Ros, p. 102, may observe his acts by deputy after inception; Baxter, p. 133, the same. But these dispensations are either from disputations, &c., after inception, which were an important part of University duty, but not a part of education, and might therefore be performed by deputy; or from sermons, which were no doubt partly regarded as training, but were also needed for the service of the University Church. Determination by proxy.

The determination of questionists on the other hand is one of the most important educational instruments in the whole course. I find it difficult to believe that the University was willing to allow this to be done by deputy. Moreover it should be noted that those who determine for others are to be of higher standing than those who determine for themselves. It may therefore be suggested that determining for others is the full bachelors' share of the disputation in quadragesima: determinatio pro se is the ordinary exercise of determination as observed by commencing bachelors only. In the latter case the questions to be solved are those that the determiner has propounded for himself; in the other case they are propounded independently, and the student is not forewarned of the questions he will have to determine.

A student might instead of arts elect to proceed to the lower degree in grammar. Many examples of Masters in Grammar incepting will be found in the pages of Grace Book A. The fee was 12*d.* as for a questionist. Certain lectures on Priscian were required before inception, the candidate had also to submit himself to examination by three masters, who might ask him any questions they pleased: these masters had to depose to his fitness, and he had to be presented by a master of grammar or by the master of the glomery. After inception the master in grammar had to lecture on Degrees in Grammar.

Priscian for a year, and also to attend three meetings, Convenite, of his faculty, during the period of his regency, in which he had to give a specimen of his skill. Stat. 117, Doc. p. 374.

Course of B.A.

But the student who chooses the more arduous path of arts has with the Baccalaureate reached the stage in which he is expected to take part in the work of the University, not only as a learner but as a teacher. He is expected to read the Posterior Analytics: cursorie no doubt. Cursory lectures are those delivered by bachelors as part of their cursus, as cursores. It seems also plain that less was expected of a cursory lecturer than of an ordinary lecturer, but the cursory lectures served a useful purpose in the times when books were scarce, before the invention of printing had done its work. And a certain amount of attendance on cursory lectures was generally required for 'form[1].' In the Elizabethan Statutes these cursory lectures of bachelors have quite disappeared. I do not find that any lectures except those on the posteriora are mentioned in the Register as required of Bachelors in Arts. There was probably a solemn public opening lecture: intrare libros posteriorum, p. 89. Certain oppositions and responsions were also required. The exact difference between these different acts forming part of the general exercise of disputation is not easy to ascertain. But it seems that the respondent opens the discussion, dealing with the question in his own way. The opponents, of whom there might be several, urge objections which the respondent has to meet: the respondent finally determines the question, unless some person of superior standing is present to conclude the discussion. Two other varieties occur, principally in the exercises of Bachelors of Divinity, which may be worthy of mention here. In connexion chiefly, if not exclusively, with Theological Studies, we hear of replications (inf. p. 89, &c.) which are certainly different from responsions. I have no certain information as to their nature, but I believe the name is used for a vivâ voce examination by the doctors. While responsions are disputations, replications would thus be a simple exchange of question and answer[2]. The term replicare

Opposition, Responsion.

Replication.

[1] 'Forma' is a very convenient medieval abbreviation used to signify all the studies, exercises, &c., required of a student by the University before admission to any Degree or stage leading to a Degree.

[2] It is also possible that replications are those visits which are paid to a doctor pro forma respondendi, cum effectu se offerre (see Doc. p. 377); in such a case it is natural to believe that a formal question and answer would symbolise the maimed responsion.

is used of the respondent when he replies to his opponents' objections; but I do not see how this can be meant. Replication of this kind would be only a part of the act of responsion.

Variation is mentioned once, p. 114. I cannot believe that this term refers to such jeux d'esprit as are quoted by Peacock, App. p. xxvi. Rather I should guess that these exercises of wit grew out of more serious academical acts, in which for instance a bachelor might choose to answer the same question as another respondent, treating it in a different way. Variation.

When all the forms had been complied with the bachelor was admitted to incept. Before admission it was required (Statute 86, Doc. p. 360) that he should have previously determined, and should have studied in the University for three years since his determination. During this period the student must hear his own master lecture on Aristotle, and attend the public mathematical lectures given in the schools. He should have acted as opponent publicly, and as respondent to three masters in their disputations. There is nothing said in this statute about lectura posteriorum. The statute may perhaps be later than the graces in this book, which imply the necessity of reading the Posterior Analytics. A new statute for inceptors in arts is mentioned, inf. p. 85. Inception in arts.

To his fitness five masters of arts should depose on oath of their own knowledge, and seven of belief: if there should be less than twelve regents in arts at the time, a full half at least of the actual regents should depose to his fitness of their own knowledge. Having thus been approved by the regents he received his license to incept from the Chancellor, or Vice-Chancellor: and became licenciate in arts. On receiving his license he paid his communa, 20*d.* and a number of other fees to University officials, the amount of which may be guessed to have been considerable, for under the Elizabethan statutes the total was 19*s.*, including 20*d.* for communa. The bedels for their visitation (see below p. 185) under these statutes received 5*s.* 4*d.* The first act of inception was the Vespers, a solemn disputation of the inceptors, of which an account is found in Stokys' diary (Peacock, App. A. xxii. foll.). The next day (the first Tuesday in July) was the Commencement: a public disputation, in Stokys' time already partly degraded to a form. And the following day every incepting master should deliver his solemn lecture of inception, which completed his degree. He then became a regent Master of Arts. He was bound as such, regere scholas, to preside Regency.

over a school; that is to say, to deliver ordinary[1] lectures on every legible day, to take his proper share in all the disputations, and to attend all masses, congregations and convocations, for the space of his necessary regency. The length of the time of regency required of a master of arts at this time seems to have been one year only. In 1537 a new statute was passed requiring two years' regency of all masters in arts (Doc. p. 438). Under the Elizabethan statutes five years were required. Graces exempting from regency, deferring inception, and dealing with all or most of the requirements may be found below.

As long as a master continued to lecture and dispute and attend the necessary functions he continued to be a regent. Apart from any stipend that he might get from his College he would receive a certain subsistence from the collectae, or fees paid by the students. These are mentioned in the old statutes (Doc. pp. 356, 391). No master was allowed to read gratuitously: for he would thus deprive his colleagues of their subsistence. It may however be conjectured that College lectures, lectura aularis, lectura in aula sua, were already becoming more important in the faculty of arts than University lectures. No master of arts is mentioned as hiring University Schools: and the only mention of schools for the artists is in connexion with their use for disputations (pp. 13, 25).

Higher Faculties. As a rule a master of arts would turn shortly after the completion of his necessary regency to one of the higher faculties. It may be doubted if music should be reckoned among the higher faculties. Music, like grammar, was a part of the Arts Course.

Degrees in Music. Degrees in Music are mentioned (p. 41, Abyngton, Mus. B., p. 45, Abyngton, Mus. M., p. 86, Lessy, Mus. B.) but we know little about the form or studies required in Cambridge. The faculties undoubtedly recognized as higher are Theology, Canon Law, Civil Law, Medicine. Of these Theology is decidedly the most important, though yielding apparently in popularity to Canon Law.

Theology. The course in Theology according to an old statute (Doc. p. 377) requires ten years' study of Theology. Statutes modifying or supplementing this statute will be found ib. p. 369 and p. 378. The former of these two statutes shews that two years extra are required from those who have been regents in arts in the University of Cambridge. The first four or six years will no doubt be filled up by attendance at lectures on the Bible, at lectures on the sentences of Petrus Lombardus, and at the public disputations. In the fifth or seventh year of study theological candidates are admitted to oppose. This act was a serious one. It extended over the chief part of an academical year (annus oppositionis, inf. p. 90), and might involve taking part in not less than sixteen disputations (inf. p. 62). Candidates were also bound to act as respondent to their own master once, and pro forma at any rate to all the masters regent in the faculty. These forms fulfilled, the deposition of one master is required de scientia and of all the others de credulitate. The candidate is then considered to be bacularius formatus in theologia (inf. p. 97) and is admitted ad intrandum sententias. The license is made effectual by a solemn entrance lecture on the Sentences[1], and the candidate is then full bachelor. The next two years are given to the cursory reading of the Sentences, and other theological studies. The candidate then 'enters' the Bible: i.e. begins a course of lectures on some book of the Old or New Testament[2]. He has also to preach a sermon at St Paul's Cross (Doc. p. 338, see inf. p. 159). The Sentences concluded, after a fresh course of oppositions, responsions, replications, he has to preach at least one sermon, the sermo examinatorius (p. 101), a test sermon in Latin ad clerum, to the clergy in St Mary's Church (Doc. p. 397). Finally, three years after the completion of the Sentences (Doc. p. 378), by the usual deposition of doctors in the faculty, and on taking the usual oaths to obey the Statutes and to proceed to his inception in due course, he is admitted to incept by the license of the Chancellor or Vice-Chancellor. After inception he becomes Doctor[3] or Master Regent in Theology. For two years he is bound to continue his regency[4] (p. 88, Thos. London) and then his arduous course is done.

Next in importance to Theology is the study of the Canon Law. Statute 122 (Doc. p. 376) deals with the course required in this faculty. Five years are given to the hearing of the civil law, and Canon Law.

[1] This is the meaning of the phrase 'sic quod intret,' e.g. Langton, inf. p. 52.

[2] It seems quite clear that in Cambridge at this time the reading of the Sentences preceded the reading of the Bible. See inf. pp. 45, 50, 73, 81. At Paris at one time the order was the opposite. See also Rashdall, Vol. II. p. 380.

[3] The word doctoratus already seems to be confined to the higher studies: that of magisterium to the degree in Arts. At least I have not found any instance of the contrary use.

[4] Within this period he is bound to preach once at St Paul's Cross, Doc. p. 338, see inf. p. 159.

three other years to the decretum, with the tractatus de simonia, de matrimonia, de poenitentia, and de consecratione (inf. p. 40). The Bible must also be heard cursorie for two years: and cursory lectures must be given on one of the above tracts and one of the books of the Decretals. The candidate must also make his solemn introitus (or opening lecture on taking the baculariatus) in the presence of[1] all the doctors of his faculty: he must act as opponent publicly in the schools [for the usual space of time], and as respondent in the schools of each of the regent masters, either effectively, or by putting in a formal appearance. Finally, all the masters in his faculty must depose to his fitness [in the manner prescribed for theology], and he must swear that he has fulfilled the prescribed form except so far as he may have a grace of dispensation. Then follow the license or admission, the vespers, commencement, inception, and regency, as in other faculties. As regents the doctors of Canon Law were bound to lecture on the Decretum, which was not read by bachelors.

Civil Law. In Civil Law for inception eight years are required, spent in hearing the Civil Law, or ten years if the candidate has not acted as regent in arts. During this time he must have heard all the ordinary books [of the Corpus] twice over, and the extraordinary books (the Digestum Novum and Infortiatum), once. He is required to read cursorie one of these latter and the Institutes. The rest of the form required is as in Canon Law. Provision is however made in the statute that if no master shall actually be regent in Civil Law the decretists (canonists) shall serve as examiners for opponency and responsions. Degrees in Civil Law are hardly sufficiently rare in this book to make it probable that this provision was often put into force. Degrees in utroque iure are sometimes noticed (e.g. p. 33, Piknam).

Medicine. Degrees in Civil Law are not very numerous, but degrees in Medicine are few and far between. We need hardly be surprised that Master William Skelton (p. 77) lost his form propter defectum doctoris legentis, and under the circumstances it was reasonable enough that he should be excused his necessary regency. The form in medicine is given on p. 375 of the Documents. The first condition is that the candidate shall have acted as regent in arts. Five years' study are required, to be spent in hearing once, Johannicius, Philaretus de pulsibus, Theophilus de urinis, one of the books of Isaac (i.e. either liber urinarum, de dietis particularibus, liber febrium or liber viatici), [1] If pro be read the meaning should perhaps be 'before.' 'In place of' may perhaps be meant, an excusatory lecture, but this seems less likely.

and the antidotarium of Nicholaus. The τέχνη of Galen, the prognostica, the aphorismi, and de regimine acutorum must each be heard twice with their commentary. Cursory lectures must be read, treating of one book on theory, and one on practice: the usual opponency and responsions are exacted and two years' practice is a further requisite: finally all the masters of this faculty must depose of knowledge of the candidate's fitness. The University then as now appears to have been anxious lest medical students should not possess adequate literary training, for it is appointed (inf. p. 97) that the students in medicines should henceforward attend a course of lectures in arts every term.

Number of Students.

The records of the degrees taken are too careless to admit of any precise comparison of one year with another, or of one study with another in respect of popularity. The numbers of questionists alone admit of comparison, and even in this case the communa of 12*d.* is not necessarily that of a questionist: it may be that of a master in grammar. In 1455–6, the first year for which we have a complete record, the number of questionists was about twenty-one; in 1483–4 thirty-one, in 1487–8 twenty-four. The attendance at the University has increased, but not very greatly. With regard to other studies one can only form impressions, the following are mine; that rather more than half the questionists proceeded to incept in Arts; and, in the higher faculties, that students in Canon Law were the most numerous; Theology and Civil Law about equally popular; Medicine decidedly behind the others, and Music last of all.

Degrees honoris causa, ad eundem, &c.

Among the variations of form recorded in the Graces we have admission to the full degree honoris causa more than once recorded; e.g. the abbots of Bury and Ramsey, on p. 125: incorporation from other universities ad eundem, e.g. Dobyll, and Wryth on the same page: and recognition of studies pursued elsewhere, as the case of Grey (l.c.). The Universities mentioned in such connexion are, so far as I have noticed, the following: Oxford appears frequently; Avignon (p. 173), Bologna (p. 209), Cologne (p. 67), and Orleans (p. 97), are all recognized not less than once. The University of Paris, once so intimately connected with English studies, is not even mentioned upon these pages. The long wars with France seem to have entirely severed the tie binding Cambridge to the mother university. And in fact the records of graduates of the English nation at Paris which are preserved from the fifteenth century shew so far as I have observed no English names. Scotchmen and Germans represent the English nation in Paris during this period. I do not think any Scots came to Cambridge between 1454 and 1488: but I have noticed two Irishmen at least, Thedward (p. 113) and Lawless, or Landless (p. 174).

The grace Intret cum suis.

One question with regard to form I have been unable to solve to my own satisfaction. What was the grace intret cum suis mentioned on pp. 41, 50, and 88? Master Edmund Cunsborough, who appears in this connexion on p. 41, was apparently the Senior Doctor of Canon Law. He claimed against the Vice-Chancellor, Master John Roclyf, that he could introduce any of his scholars to be admitted without the customary grace intret cum suis provided he had completed his form. It would seem that before admission to any degree (that is, before receiving the license to enter or incept) the congregation of regents passed a formal grace allowing the candidate to be presented by his sponsors. "Let him come into St Mary's Church with the doctor who is to present him and the others who give him their countenance." The grace intret cum suis will thus be the passing of the Supplicat, as we should say in modern terms, the formal act approving the candidate as duly qualified. But this explanation is conjectural.

Details of form.

I may collect here one or two other points of detail with respect to form that require explanation. Excusatory lectures are lectures delivered in place of a doctor reading in ordinary. The grace in favour of William Wood on page 29 is the most interesting of several dealing with this point. William Wood, Bachelor of Canon Law, has done four years' study, he has lectured in his College, and he has been allowed to read ordinary lectures in place of the doctor during three terms. He may therefore be admitted to incept at once without any further form. Similarly John Burton (p. 25) is to excuse [a doctor] within a term, and Mr Edward Shuldam (p. 67) has excused a doctor twenty times.

University Terms.

The University year consisted then as now of three terms, but residence during the greater part of any term sufficed to 'keep' it[1]. This seems to be what is meant by Mr Wylde's grace on p. 52. The autumn term to which allusion is so often made is the Long Vacation, the magna cessatio. The other terms are hiemalis, quadragesimalis, and aestivalis. That the Long Vacation is the terminus autumnalis may be seen on page 146: and that long vacations were allowed to count gratiose though not rigorose is clear from the grace of Richard Bullock on page 118.

[1] We still mark the division of term in our calendar, though it no longer has the importance, as bearing on residence, which it once possessed.

Practice, Cloister study, &c.

Practice in canon law is often allowed to count towards form, as in the case of W. Rae, p. 105, and of the Vicar of Stortford, p. 184. The latter had acted as ordinary for two years, and might be therefore expected to know his canon law. Time in a cloister is often allowed to count as time in the University, as for instance on p. 7, Henry Rykynghall, on p. 72, Robert Kubith, and on p. 97, where we find that Friar Bedford brings a certificate of study from the prior general of his order, which entitles him to rank as fully qualified for the baccalaureate. A general grace is granted on p. 141 to the prior of S. Oswald and all the scholars of that monastery, that they may have the same form that they have at Oxford.

Concurrence of mendicant friars.

The feeling against the mendicant friars had been so great that a statute had been passed not only at Cambridge but also at all the chief Universities, that two brothers of the same order should not incept or read the Sentences in the same year in the same University (Doc. pp. 395, 396). The frequent graces granting leave of 'concurrence' are exemptions from the action of this statute (pp. 16, 88, 96), which appears also to have been extended to the act of opponency (p. 101). That mendicant friars should pay no communa is a very strange concession, to be found on p. 190. I do not find it confirmed by any other passage. That the proctor of the year should have been a mendicant is impossible: for the mendicants did not take the Arts course.

Typical career.

I will conclude this sketch of University form as presented by the Grace Book and supplemented by the Statutes by a sketch of a normal University career. Owing partly to the imperfection of the records we do not find many careers that can be traced from the question in Arts to the final inception in Divinity or Law. But the career of Roger Bower is a fair type. In the year 1470–1 Roger Bower was admitted to the question. He incepted three years later at the end of the year 1473–4. He had a grace exempting him from regency [ex post facto] in 1476–7, but must have resumed his regency later, for he was proctor in 1480–1. He opposed in 1483–4. In the same year he had a grace allowing him to enter the Sentences, and excusing him from a part of the burdens of his duties as Bachelor. In the year 1486–7 he was admitted by grace to incept, and no doubt completed his course by the usual inception. I doubt whether any career can be found in Grace Book A which so nearly approaches the normal.

On the other hand the venerable George Fitzhugh passed by a series of graces through all the stages from B.A. to D.D. within six years, as will be seen from the entries under his name in the index.

Government of the University.

Such were the studies of the University as they appear in the Proctors' Book. On the government of the University the Proctors have not much to say. At the head of the University is the Chancellor, elected according to the Statutes (Doc. p. 309) by all the Regents in Arts, if there were as many as twelve Regents, if not, by all the Regents and non-Regents. He is no longer nominated or even confirmed by the Bishop of Ely; though an echo of past controversies may be heard in the mention of the copy of a Papal Bull against the Bishop of Ely (p. 20). We are just in the time, as it would seem, when the taste for the magnificent and non-resident is beginning permanently to set in. Among the Chancellors mentioned in this book, Robert Woodlark, John Booth, William Wulfleet [and Richard le Scrope], were respectable residents at the time of their election, humble masters of colleges at the best. But the taste for Bishops is creeping on us with Laurence Booth (1456—8). It is quite confirmed with Thomas Rotheram, who is the only Chancellor mentioned in our pages after 1466, though his rule was probably not quite continuous. And before the pages of Meers' diary close we hear of Thomas Cromwell, who in 1535 will consent to act as honorary Chancellor of the University, and will continue in that office till his hasty death. Henceforward the University will not be content unless it has a magnate for its head.

The Chancellor.

The Vice-Chancellor.

The non-residence of the Chancellor tends to advance the importance of the Vice-Chancellor. The old statute (Doc. p. 311) forbids that the Chancellor shall be absent for more than a month between the beginning of the October Term and the commencement of the Long Vacation. If he be absent for more than fifteen days the power of naming his deputy shall rest, not with him, but with the congregation of Regents. Thus with a non-resident Chancellor the Vice-Chancellor holds office continuously. The election of a Vice-Chancellor by the Regents,—a [religious] doctor of Theology being in scrutiny with a proctor in accordance with the statute for the election of a Chancellor (Doc. p. 309),—is recorded below, p. 224. The list of Vice-Chancellors mentioned in the Grace Book will be found in the index sub voce.

Appeals.

The ordinary judge of the University is the Chancellor's commissary. Appeal lies from him to the Chancellor, or Vice-Chancellor (p. 18); and from the latter to the congregation of Regents and non-Regents (p. 41). If any appeal is considered to be frivolous there is a fine of twelve pence pro appellacione frustratoria, frequently recorded in these pages. On page 7 the purchase of a book to enroll the wills of members of the University is recorded, but there is no other note of the exercise of the testamentary jurisdiction of the University. Fines for breach of the peace are frequently recorded in the Register, and it may be noticed that on p. 112 a book of the Institutes is imposed in lieu of a fine. It does not appear whether the book was to be read or written out. It is possible that the scope on page 20 were for corporal punishment. No sign can be found in these pages of the jurisdiction of masters over their pupils in all cases in which the other party was not a graduate; or of the numerous University judges who at an earlier time are conjectured to have had jurisdiction at Oxford.

Various assemblies.

For the election of proctors and of taxors the assembly of regents in arts only is supreme (Doc. pp. 338, 349), for matters relating to graces, degrees, and forms, the congregation of regents. For the making of statutes and matters touching the general interests of the University the consent of the assembly of regents and non-regents is required (Doc. p. 308). Whether there is any distinction between a congregation and a convocation (inf. p. 114) I cannot be certain. Such a distinction existed at Oxford already in the sixteenth century. (Rashdall, Vol. II. p. 374.)

The Head.

It would appear from Meers (inf. p. 230) that the Head or Caput were officers required in any congregation. The assembly on that occasion appears to have been of doctors and bachelors in divinity only. The Head is not elsewhere mentioned in these pages, but it is believed to have consisted of a doctor in each faculty, one regent and one non-regent master of arts, and one religious doctor in theology. This is the form preserved in the Elizabethan statutes, except that in those statutes the doctor of Canon Law and the religious doctor have naturally disappeared. The function of the Head was to prepare all matters to be laid before the congregation. The veto which each several member of the Head possessed on all proposals in those statutes is thought to have belonged to them originally. Each member represented a several interest, and his veto would be exercised for the advantage of the body which he represented. But the method of election prescribed under Elizabeth, which practically gave the nomination of the Caput for each year to the Heads of Houses, is considered to have been an innovation.

We do not however know in what manner the Head was actually elected in our period. (See also Rashdall, II. p. 556.)

The Proctors.

The duties of the Proctors are set forth in a statute (Doc. p. 340). It was their duty to regulate the times of disputing and lecturing, of burial services, inceptions, and festivals. Thus we find on p. 30 Mr Thomas Tourney associated with the proctors in the duty of providing for lectures in canon and civil law. The proctors had authority to enforce their decisions on such points if necessary, with appeal in graver cases to the Chancellor and Masters. Their power in this respect extended to the suspension of members of the University, gremial or non-gremial, from all rights and privileges (Doc. p. 348).

On p. 202 we find the Proctors patrolling the streets to repress disturbances. The same may be meant by 'making their hours,' p. 224; and their jurisdiction over improper persons may be noticed on pp. 201, 228. They had charge of the University Chest, and of all the cautions that were deposited as security for the performance of University acts. The income they administered was not very large but it was made to do good service. In 1456–7 a new chest was made at the cost of twenty-eight shillings and sixpence (p. 11). Nevertheless the chest was robbed seven years later, and it was found necessary to make two new locks, and to remove the chest to a place of greater safety (p. 37). In spite of this loss and in spite of the great expense to which the University was going the state of the chest steadily improves. In 1461 the University had nine pounds and tenpence in hand. In 1481 this sum had swelled to eighty-one pounds seven shillings and sixpence, and in 1488 we have the University in the possession of one hundred and twelve pounds eighteen shillings and a penny.

Audit of accounts.

There were two computi in the year: one at the end of June, before the feast of St John Baptist, and another at the beginning of the October term, when the expenses of the long vacation were reckoned up. The University finance and financial control was good, but I cannot say the same about the arithmetic. Unless I am much at fault, the addition is frequently erroneous. I have obelized the totals when I have been unable to approve the calculation of the proctors and their auditors. It is perhaps interesting to note that Arabic figures are occasionally used.

Action of Proctors.

The Proctors act as agents for the University in all kinds of business. They are generally on any building committee. They give alms for the University at the mass for benefactors. They buy a book to enroll the wills of students dying in the University (p. 7). They buy vestments, bell ropes, candlesticks, and innumerable oddments. They travel to London, to Ely, to Bury, to Norwich, at the University expense. They hire a detective to prevent Mr Terry from leaving Cambridge without the knowledge of the University (p. 49). They get Mr Wennysbury's horses appraised (p. 54); perhaps they may even have appraised the horses themselves. They take great pains to get Frenge and Bordeclew imprisoned and retained in prison for some unknown offence (pp. 48, 49). They burn the books of Reginald Peacock (p. 20). For some obscure purpose they attend a General Chapter of Canons at Huntingdon (p. 130). They do all that is needed to be done, and as far as we can see they do it very well.

Their standing.

Yet I think we must assume that the Proctors were very young. They are bound to be regent Masters of Arts, and as a rule they take up the proctorship within two or three years of their inception. They may be no more than twenty-three or twenty-four years old; they can hardly be more than thirty in any case. At this time they still directly represent the regent Masters of Arts. In the year 1514 we get the first statute ordaining a rotation of colleges for supplying nominees to the office of proctor (Doc. p. 426), but it is plain from Meers that the election even in his time was not a mere form (inf. p. 223). The earliest rota appears to be intended to prevent any one College or Hostel from securing too much power in the University. It was not intended to supersede the election.

List of Proctors.

The following is a list of the Proctors who held office in the University during this period. I believe there is no doubt that the years are rightly assigned: it will be seen that there are three proctors in the year 1484–5. To explain this I assume that William Gedge died or was obliged to retire in the course of that year, in fact in the Lent term of 1485, and that he was succeeded by Gilbert Urmston. There is a change of handwriting in the corresponding place of the list of fees and of the list of cautions. If this assumption is not correct, the whole chronology falls into confusion: and we must be content to leave it so.

1451–2. Baker (p. 19).
1452–3. (?) John Fleming and Edmund Hampden (p. 2).
1453–4. (?) Edward Burton and Thomas Wygston (p. 1).

1454–5. Henry Boleyn and John Gunthorp.
1455–6. Henry Boleyn and John Bolton.
1456–7. Robert Hawburgh and Gerard Skipwith.
1457–8. William Dunthorn and Richard Warburton.
1458–9. Robert Stewkyn and John Yottyn.
1459–60. Richard Morgan and Oliver King.
1460–1. William Skyby and William Skelton.
1461–2. John Barnby and William Greybarn.
1462–3. Thomas Langton and John Gray.
1463–4. John Lyndesey and William Rucshawe.
1464–5. John Breton and Giles Dent.
1465–6. William Wych and William Langton.
1466–7. William Langton and Christopher Lofthouse.
1467–8. John Day and William Wood.
1468–9. Thomas Wright and Thomas Laxton.
1469–70. Thomas Cosyn and Ambrose Reppyngton.
1470–1. Thomas Taylard and Thomas Maudsley.
1471–2. John Wells and Edmund Hanson.
1472–3. John Argentem and John Otley.
1473–4. Ralph Songer and Richard Cockerham.
1474–5. John Trotter and Richard Smith.
1475–6. Thomas Bowd and John Ratford.
1476–7. Richard Frere and Robert Woodruff.
1477–8. Thomas Swain and Gerard Borell.
1478–9. William Stockdale and John Leycroft.
1479–80. Robert Welby and Robert Cutler.
1480–1. William Thomson and Roger Bower.
1481–2. Philip Morgan and Thomas Hole.
1482–3. John Gree and Hammond Grave.
1483–4. John Smith and Robert Hacumpleyn.
1484–5. John Butler and William Gedge: then Gilbert Urmston.
1485–6. W. Fitzjohn and Henry Babington.
1486–7. Water and William Birley.
1487–8. Richard Wall and Thomas Basset.
1488–9. Thomas Metcalf and Roger Labron.

Taxors. Next after the proctors in importance are the Taxors. These officers appear in every medieval University. Their primary function is to assess the rent of houses leased for University purposes, or for the residence of scholars. At this time they had also the supervision of victuals and victuallers, of weights and measures, and the assize of bread and beer. In the 16th century this was transferred by statute to the proctors: but shortly afterwards restored to the taxors. The proctors assist them in their duties: they burn the herrings [which the taxors had condemned], p. 7; and they procure the standard weights and measures which the taxors used (pp. 136, 137, 171, 186). The taxors are mentioned, pp. 186, 222. They were elected by the Regents in Arts. In Meers' time a nomination of six taxors was made by all the doctors and the Heads of houses: the Regents in Arts then selected two (p. 223).

Scrutators. The Scrutators are elected [by the house of non-regents (inf. p. 224)]. They act as officers of the non-regent house, taking the votes in that house, and declaring the results. In the proctors' registers the scrutators appear to have acted together with the proctors as guardians in some sort of the Common Chest (inf. p. 131). They also have some oversight over the graces and dispensations made (inf. p. 140), and are bound in such matters by the same obligations as bind the proctors (Doc. p. 358).

Auditors. Auditors of the Common Chest appear to have been elected [by both houses]. On p. 131 five doctors are seen acting as auditors.

Master of Glomery. With regard to the Master of Glomery, I do not think that anything more is known now than was known when Peacock wrote (Observations on the Statutes, App. p. xxxii.). The only important function that seems to remain to this officer in the period with which we are concerned is the duty of standing in scrutiny together with the two youngest regents in arts at the election of the proctors (p. 223). If there be no Master of Glomery his place is taken by the youngest non-regent. Already at the end of the fifteenth century this functionary appears to have been an antiquated curiosity, and the post was not always filled.

Chaplains. The University had chaplains. We learn this from the Statute dealing with the general processions of the University (Doc. p. 400). The chaplains walk in such a procession between the bachelors and the regent masters. On p. 219 there is mention of a clerk of the University. The fee there paid is apparently the fee so frequently mentioned pro baiulacione crucis, for bearing the cross: and the same fee is paid on p. 57 to the clerk of the Church of St Mary. The priest of the University, who receives ten shillings from the rent of the Schools of Civil Law (p. 8), is, I suppose, one of these clerks or chaplains. But the payment does not reappear, nor is the reason stated.

Librarian. A librarian is mentioned on p. 40. He is to receive annually from the rent of the schools of Canon Law forty shillings. One such payment of twenty shillings is recorded on p. 43, but it has been afterwards erased. We must suppose that the custodian of the library received this money direct from those who paid it, or not at all.

Bedels. The bedels at this time were two in number, besides the Bedel of Glomery, if there still was a Bedel of Glomery. In Meers' time there were three bedels (inf. p. 227). It might almost seem that there were four: Meers, Sherwood, Adams and Wintringham (p. 222). In Stokys' book (Peacock, App. p. XII. and note) there are three bedels. They acted as Masters of the Ceremonies at all University acts and functions, and received so many pairs of gloves on various occasions that they must have found it difficult to wear them out. The office was not unremunerative, for they received fees from all members of the University proceeding to any degree. This was called the Visitation of the Bedels, and is the subject of a special grace on p. 185, besides being noticed in several graces, e.g. 44 sic quod visitet bedellos, p. 87 sic quod solvat bedellis.

Lady Margaret Reader. The regent masters and doctors did all the University lecturing: with the lectures in the Colleges we have no concern. But we are witnesses through Meers (p. 230) of an interesting ceremony,—the election of a Lady Margaret reader in Divinity. This was at the time the only salaried professorship existing. The election seems to have been annual, by the doctors and bachelors of the faculty, and Dr Buckmaster was on this occasion re-elected.

Public Orator. Meers does not mention the election of a public orator, though the office was already existing in his time. Caius Auberinus, who appears frequently in these pages as writing letters for the University, must have been the predecessor of the Public Orator in some of his functions (see Index, Auberinus). I do not know that we have in this book any specimens of the handiwork of the poet Caius: but the letters we have do little credit to the Latinity of the University. Turgid, verbose, obscure, involved, and frequently ungrammatical, these letters fully justify the University in feeing a foreigner to do this work for them in future.

The Colleges. Passing from the personal equipment of the University to its institutions of a more permanent kind, we come to the Colleges. This register adds little to our knowledge of College history. King's College, the New College, or the College of St Nicholas, appears several times. Twelve masters were admitted from King's in 1456–7 (p. 9), a large number. I think we must assume that some of them were new-comers. The agreement between that College and the University is mentioned on p. 10: the journeys to town on pp. 5 and 6 may have been concerned with this agreement, which is not the original composition of 1448, but a modified concession ratified by the king in 1456. There was a serious fire at King's (pp. 12, 13), in which the University buildings ran some danger of destruction. In 1473–4 the University released the College from a payment of eighty-eight pounds; how incurred we are not told (p. 98).

The college of Gonwell or of the Annunciation of Our Lady is mentioned in connexion with the election of a custos (p. 4), and (pp. 13, 25) with reference to the hiring of a school for the disputations of masters of arts. St Benet's or Corpus Christi[1] appears frequently as receiving the rent of part of the site of the schools of Civil Law. The Master of Queen's (Andrew Doget) is mentioned on p. 9, and the benefactions of the Duke of Gloucester to that College are recognized on p. 172. In the notices of King's Hall, pp. 46, 63, Michael House, p. 59, Queen's, p. 67, there is no special interest. The Master of Trinity Hall was called to the degree of Doctor of Civil Law (p. 40), and the College is also mentioned pp. 59, 68, but nothing of value is there recorded.

The following Hostels are noted, chiefly as identifying persons admitted to degrees or otherwise concerned in payments: Hostels.

Burdon Hostel, pp. 147, 169.
Fishwick Hostel, pp. 26, 75, 94.
Garett Hostel, pp. 64, 121.
Gregory's Hostel or Newmarket Hostel, pp. 9, 60.
Howing's Inn (hospitium Hugonis), pp. 41, 115, 142, 169, 170.
St Barnabas, p. 42.
St Catharine's Hostel, p. 114.
St Mary's Hostel, pp. 9, 40.
St Nicholas Hostel, p. 122.
Trinity Hostel, pp. 100, 126.

[1] pp. 19, 48, 49, 55, 65, 83, 185, 201, 219.

None of these notices are of any special interest except perhaps the feud between Burdon Hostel and Howing's Inn, pp. 169, 170. I think these passages make it certain that hospitium Hugonis is only an alias for Hoving's or Oving's Inn. Mr Clark following Fuller distinguishes between them. The other hostels (except St Barnabas) will all be found in his list[1]. St Mary's Hall, mentioned twice (pp. 48, 83), once in connexion with Corpus Christi, would seem to be another alias for this College, founded as it will be remembered by the Guilds of Corpus Christi and St Mary. The Angel Inn is mentioned p. 186, and the Keys Inn, p. 170.

Monastic orders.

This list of the Colleges and Hostels mentioned would not be complete without some reference to the convents and monastic establishments which played their own part in the University. The number of monks and friars recorded as taking degrees is considerable: and we know that the eldest religious doctor had a standing in the University which can only be explained as that of the representative of a separate and important interest. The rules about cloister study and 'concurrence' mentioned above (p. xxxi) further prove how important the regulars were in the University life.

But we are chiefly concerned with the monastic bodies established within the precincts at this time. All the great mendicant orders had a house here. The Carmelites between Queens' and King's[2]; the Augustinian Friars near Free School lane: the Dominicans or preaching Friars where Emmanuel now stands: and the Franciscans or Minorites on the site of Sidney Sussex. Members of each of these orders are mentioned in the following pages. The buildings of the Austin Friars seem to have been used for University purposes (p. 24). Seats were set up for the doctors there (p. 49). The Franciscan church was used in the same way[3]. The Benedictines had a hostel or college on the present site of Magdalene. The prior of the students (pp. 12, 205) would seem to have been an officer charged with the supervision of the students belonging to this order. The Gilbertines or White Canons had a house near Little St Mary's Church. Their prior entered in theology 1475–6 (inf. p. 111). The Augustinian canons had of course their great priory at Barnwell.

In short the monastic orders and their houses must have played a considerable part in the Cambridge of the fifteenth century.

The last half of this century was a great time of building in the University. The whole history of University building has been admirably written, and need not be repeated here. But some note of the various University Buildings mentioned in these pages is necessary. The schools of Theology, and of Canon Law on the north and west sides of the schools quadrangle already existed[1]. Above the school of Canon Law was the new Library, recently finished when our period begins. The choir of St Mary's was standing, but the nave had been burned down[2]. The University had recently built a new chapel. It was being finished when our records begin. Lead was supplied for its roof (pp. 2, 3), pavement (pp. 6, 7), and finally mats and benches (p. 19). On p. 12 it is called the Chapel of the Common Chest. This probably formed part of the buildings on the Schools site. Buildings.

In 1457 a Syndicate was appointed with powers to take all steps for the erection of a new school for Philosophy and Civil Law. The alternative erection of a Library seems to contemplate the erection of another Library, with a view perhaps to using the existing building as a school. The grace will be found below, p. 8. The special means adopted for raising funds required another statute (p. 13), and contributions were also freely solicited (inf. p. 56). This was the building on the south side of the Schools Quadrangle, whose history has been fully given by Mr Clark (Vol. III. Arch. Hist.). It will be sufficient to refer here to the Index (s.v. Schools, new) and to state that the work appears to have been finally completed in 1470–1, though some additional ornaments and fixtures were subsequently added.

The works in the nave of St Mary's Church were begun in 1478–9. A considerable sum is recorded by the proctors as having been spent during our years, but the work was not completed until 1519, when the total charge had amounted to £795 (Lamb's Documents, p. 8). St Mary's Church.

Of these institutions there is one that is not complete when walls have been provided. The Library must have been constantly though slowly growing during these years. I have spoken above of Library.

[1] We have notices of the hire of schools of Canon Law and Civil Law from the University by [the heads of] the respective faculties. See Index, Schools.

[2] I do not know where the bell house mentioned p. 37 was situated.

the Librarian, and the provision for him that was voted if not paid by the University. The work on the Library was just being completed when our records begin. Lead and other accessories are provided, pp. 2 and 3. But a year or so later the Library is in use. Chains are provided for the books (p. 10). The books were in imminent danger from the fire at King's (pp. 12, 20). The names of donors are being affixed to the books (p. 84); the Earl of Worcester had made a considerable present (ibid.). A new statute is made for the Library (p. 90). Tables of the books are hung up there (p. 107). Lists of all the books were written out and sent to the Chancellor (p. 122). This list still exists. The Chancellor is a munificent giver of books (pp. 130, 136, 187). On the whole, even if the Librarian's stipend was not paid, the Library does not seem to have been neglected[1].

Chests. There is another set of University institutions which deserves a passing notice. There can be little doubt that benefactors of the University were largely influenced by the desire that prayers might be said on their behalf when they were dead. The foundation of a 'chest' in the University secured this end at comparatively small expense, and at the same time afforded to poor students a very valuable aid. A sum of money was given or bequeathed to be deposited in a chest called after the name of the donor. The chest stood in some church and was placed in the charge of two masters, one regent, and one non-regent. From the capital small sums of money were lent on pledge, but without interest, to students whose annual income did not exceed a modest figure. The loans were for one year only, and if not redeemed within that space the pledges were sold for the benefit of the chest. The debtor received the balance of the value of his pledge when his debt had been paid. In return for the benefaction the University was bound to celebrate a mass once a year for the soul of the pious founder, and at all general masses for benefactors his name was to be mentioned with the rest. Moreover every borrower from the chest was engaged to say certain paters and aves for the good of the donor's soul[2].

[1] Other mentions of the Library will be found on pp. 19, 34, 37, 48, 56, 82, 84, 85, 109, 122–3, 124, 186, 199, 219, 220.

The following chests are mentioned in the Proctors' Register (1454—1488). Billingford, p. 137, Darlington, pp. 48, 186, Exeter, pp. 19, 54, 107, Fen, p. 153 (founded by Hugh Fenn, 1480—1), Gotham, pp. 119, 130, 135,

It will be seen that if faithfully and carefully administered the original capital would remain undiminished, but without increase, so long as the University existed. But there were many chances of loss, and hardly any of gain. The masters appointed to manage the Chest might be negligent or complaisant, they might even be dishonest. The pledges might be overvalued. The stationaries who received them for sale might neglect to pay over the price. We have an instance below (p. 135), when a stationary deceased was found to owe money to several chests. It is to be feared that only a small part of this debt was recovered. Exposed to such dangers it is perhaps surprising that the chests should have escaped as well as they did. In 1489 however the losses amounted to a considerable sum, for Elizabeth Clere gave 200 marks for their restoration (Cooper, I. p. 235). In 1544 the University borrowed £220 from two of the chests, and other sums apparently from the chests of Fen, Neale, Trinity, Darlington and Exeter, allocating a considerable part of the revenues of Burwell to repay the loans (Doc. p. 448). In Fuller's time the moneys had entirely disappeared, though 'annual cofferers are chosen, for key-keepers of those cabinets, whose jewels are got away.'

Stationaries.

With a glance at the stationaries of the University our survey of personnel and institutions will be complete. The Index will shew the occasions on which the stationaries are mentioned. These persons occupied an anomalous position. They were not students, nor were they exactly servants or tradesmen. They were the official agents of the University for the sale of pledges, and official valuers of 185, 187 (in St Michael's Church), Lynke, pp. 65, 66, Neal, pp. 44, 48, 54, St John, pp. 54, 56, Trinity, pp. 54, 136. I take the following principally from Fuller, p. 130:

Chest	Donor	Sum	Time
Billingford	Richard de Billingford (Chancellor of the University)	100 pounds	1400
Darlington	Darlington	uncertain	——
Exeter	Thomas Beaufort, Duke of Exeter	uncertain	1426
Fen	Hugh Fenn	uncertain	1480–1
Gotham	William de Gotham, Chancellor	uncertain	1376
Lynke or Ling	Richard Ling, Chancellor	uncertain	1352
Neal	Walter Neale, citizen of London; John Whithorn, Rector of Holsted	100 pounds	1344
St John's	St John (?)	uncertain	——
Trinity	William Bateman, Bishop of Ely	100 pounds	1348

manuscripts and other valuables offered as security. They seem to have received an occasional fee from the Chest. The analogy of other Universities suggests that they were bound to supply books to the students at a fixed tariff, and that they also acted as intermediaries between buyer and seller when a student had a book to sell. Like the servants and tradesmen dependent on the University they were under the University jurisdiction.

Herewith this introduction may be concluded. Its aim is partly that of a commentary upon the text, and partly that of an index. It is hoped that it will be found to contain in appropriate places mention of all matters that required explanation, and of all points of special interest that occur in the following pages. When all records of our University and of the sister University at Oxford have been published much that now appears obscure will be elucidated. Such a publication as this supplies some of the material that is still needed for the reconstruction of medieval University life and studies. Unfortunately its facts are bare and bloodless, and the utmost partiality of an editor cannot regard them as vitally important.

Yet this is an important epoch, if not for its own sake, still as the age when the Renaissance was preparing. We find in these pages no hint of the coming dawn: no book that is exposed as caution can be even suspected of containing any fragment of the new Greek learning: the University exercises are still running the old dull round, perhaps with less than the old enthusiasm, certainly with none of the new vigour: a printed book is once mentioned, and only once, almost as a curiosity (p. 200). But in order to understand the Renaissance we must learn to know the condition of things that preceded: and towards that result it is hoped that this publication may contribute something.

An asterisk is affixed to words which cannot be certainly deciphered or expanded. An obelus denotes a reading which is certainly that of the manuscript, but which appeared to the editor ungrammatical or otherwise questionable. Passages printed in italics are those which have been cancelled in the Register, or in some cases, which will easily be recognized, notes made by the Editor. The figures in the margin indicate the folio numbers of the manuscript.

Sancti Martini in oxonia et Gardiani de Tatirsawle

immortali deo concessum viros quoscumque diligere virtute prestantes: non te alienum esse putauimus: quom ad te omnes homines laudes accumulant: quibus virtus tua: morum eligancia. et vite sanctimonia. ante hac vna cognita erat. Incredibile enim est quantum sapientes nostre alme vniuersitatis. illam tuam singularem modestiam ac mansuetudinem animi tui laudant atque commemorant. Referente etiam N. nostro: in artibus Magistro. et tue prestancie omni tempore deditissimo. nouimus atque intelleximus salutem nostram et charam tibi et iucundam esse. et quod nos magna beneuolencia prosequeris: et nos studiosos viros et bonos† artibus incumbentes semper charipendis. Quamobrem: Cantibrigienses qui studiis literarum indulgent: vehementer te diligunt: amant: colunt: venerantur. Conabimurque nos pro illa maxima egregiaque et singulari beneuolencia erga nos tua. personam tuam honorare: et quicquid tibi voluptati fore tue arbitramur: semper esse obituros Dedimus namque ad tuam prestanciam pro illa beneuolencia tua quod possumus et vno ore concedimus eum honorem et divinum* gradum nobiscum esse: quem tu optimo ivre oxonie meritus es. Fac igitur Rogamus quod tibi superius concedimus Reuerende pater: et rem nobis gratissimam facturus es. si a te concedere digneris quod a te fieri nos cupimus omnes. Vale nosque cantebrigienses mutuo ama: qui te summe diligunt. Ex Cantebrigia.

101 a Litera pro incorporacione M. Danet Capellani Domini Regis

Vniuersitatis Cantibrigiensis cetus floridissimus Regencium et non Regencium M. T.* Danet sacre theorie† professori eximio ac Regio capellano salutem plurimam dicit. Non maiori leticia maiori ve gaudio solet hec mater nostra Cantebrigia ex illis affici liberis quos ab incunabulis tenerrimo prius vbere ac solidis demum scienciarum pabulis in summos perfectosque prouexerit honores quam ex hiis quos iam adultos et bonarum arcium studio alibi non mediocriter enutritos suis pro meritis in filios atque conciues sponte adoptauerit. Neque iniuria. vt enim ait quidam. non tam succincte quam bene. par virtus pari animo suscipienda est. Quo fit amantissime vir vt cum tuorum fama prouulgante. consideraremus morum prestanciam animi magnitudinem probitatem et id genus aliaque preclara facinora quibus christianissimi eiusdemque beneficentissimi regis nostri apud quem plurimum potes non modo familiam prefulgentissimam priuatis adornas officiis verum eciam tocius anglie regnum et presertim ciuitatem illam amplissimam londoniensem publica doctrina publicisque sermonibus indies illustras. Non possumus non accendi in tuum amorem atque beneuolenciam. et eo vehemencius quod hanc nostram largicionem (quemadmodum ex cordatis accepimus viris) maximi facturum te nullatenus ambigitur. Quasobres scias te volumus omnium nostrum et singulorum vnanimi assensu et consensu illo speciali a nobis donatum munere quatinus libere: cum velis nobiscum in conciuem assumi et viuidum nostre matris membrum valeas incorporari Ad hanc igitur vrbem tanto tamque magnifico potiturus beneficio Fac vt quam maturius venias. Quod si feceris nichill vnquam gracius nobis nihil que acceptius abs te fieri posse existimamus Vale Date sunt he Cantebrigie in plena nostra congregacione et sigillo communi signate sexto nonas maias

Cum animaduertimus hominum colendissime quibus tui progeniem 101 b
quantis quamque maximis nostram vniuersitatem beneficiis exornasse. ne immemores beneficii videamur: eiisdem compulsi meritis: indies mente perscrutamur qua racione pares tibi vices referamus. Est sane inhumanum nichill maius (arbitramur) quam in prole: bene merita patris incognita obliuisci. Quod quidem tanto inhonestius: nequiusque fit: quanto scienciarum gloria: ac virtutum ornamento celsius coram estat†. Enim vero meminimus nec latere poterit quanto nos amore tui auunculus . anglicane tocius ecclesie ierarcha . et sedis apostolice Cardinalis meritissimus amplexabatur: cum nostra in vniuersitate (quo nobis immortale decus contigisse reputauimus) dum minime fastiduit nostro cetui incorporari Nec postea vnquam vbi necesse fuerat petitis defuit pronus adiutor: Nos ea propter cum vsui tibi fore non possumus: saltem honori vtcumque valebimus (tametsi citra condignum) obnoxios esse profitemur. Concedentes vt tui merita scienciarumque fulgor depostulant te cum velis (ac vtinam velis) sacro in canone ad tui libitum incipiendo posse doctorari. Idque mox . si commode . vt agatur vna cupidine rogamus omnes accensi. Fac temet eum cupimus graduque prebeas cognitum. quem tue virtutes esse volunt. Erit quidem nostre vrbi gaudio incredibili: tante arboris illic inseri plantam: qua tucius poterit in posterum procellosis aduersancium obsistere iniuriis: ac lecius quieciusque partis gaudere priuilegiis Quod te opitulante facile fieri non ambigimus. [The following diary belongs to the year of office of Nicholas Ridley and Richard Wilkes, Proctors 1533–4.]

The fryday before Mychellmasday ye vyce chawncelor sent ye Mayre 26 Sept 1533
worde to be at seint Mary chyrche at one of ye clocke for to take & here ye answere of ye lybell to wit vnder suche forme fyrst ye vice ch. cawsyd ye towne clarke to fett ye copy theroff & to rede euery artycle & ye vyce orderly made answer to euery one by mowghte but ye mayre & hys brotherne were not so content but wolde yn any case haue hyt yn wrytynge to ye yntente (as thei sayde) that thei myghte reply agaynst suche as pleasyd them not but ye vyc. answerde & sayde he promysyd them no suche thyng nor no syche thynge thei requyryd of hym nor thei shuld nott compell to no suche thynge. yn many poyntes they were contente yn other sum they wer nott when all wer answeryd to they departyd & dranke together at ye pompe tauerne & ye vnyuersyte payde for all ther was a very great multytude bothe of scholars & other townsmen yn ye chyrche at ye same tyme. Mr Chapman Mayre to cum bade ye vycechawnceler to dyner apon Mychellmas day & so departyd Apon Michaelmas day betwyxte ix & x the Mayre with hys company solemply went to ye hall yn ther best aray & abowt a quartar of an owre before xj aclocke ye baylyffes were sente from the Mayre to the vycecha. to desyre hym to cum to ye hall, the doctors wer warned to be at saynte Mary chyrche at x of ye clocke but hyt was past xj or ye vycechawnceler came thyther & from thens wente vnto ye hall ye vycechawnc. d. Metcalfe yn scarlet doctor Buckmaster d. lockwood. d. haryson yn skarlet & doctor Rowghesbye with ye proctors and lx or lxxx scholars besyde when thei came ther Mr Slegge with an hawnt cowntynans sayde yt ys agayst my wyll ye shuld haue ye cussyon & I am not bownde to lett yow haue hytt. the Mayre recayvyd ye vycechawnceler lovyngly (as hyt aperyd) by ye hande & so after dyuers reasons made to & fro concernynge the othe the Mayre tooke hys othe yn maner & forme as he was wonte to doo saue that he reqyryd hyt fyrst to be redde yn laten & then yn ynglysshe or he wolde swere The vyce. made none exhortacyon, after ye Mayre hadde sworne ye baylyffes swore & payde ye proctors iij^s iiij^d for ye serche of lether after thys ye vyce. & doctors departyd to saynte Mary chyrche vntyll ye clothes wer layde & vntyll suche tyme as thei were sente for to dyner by ij that had ben baylyffes; none of ye bedelles dyned ther that day, but wyntryngam Mr hyde & Mr slegge affyrmed that ye Mayre owth none obedyens to ye vyc. as vyc. but as spekyng yn ye kynges name Maxwell & dyuers scholars wer lyke to lye by ye eares becawse he wold not let them yn.

The day before Michaelmes day was callyd a convocatyon to rede certayne letters before the unyuersyte sent to ye kynge, the Queene, ye bysshoppe of Canterbury, ye dukes of Norfolk, & Suffolk, to the erles of Wylsheere Sussex & oxforthe to my lorde Chawnceler to Mr cromwell.

[This appereth to be in the 26 of H. the 8 because mr Cromwell then begann to be in fauour]

The saterday after Mychelmas day ye Mayre made hys proclamacyon on the market hyll he hymself standynge at Ihon veyses stall whyche was specyally concernynge the serche of lether.

Where ye Mayre & hys offycers cawsyd ye statute of sellynge flasshe to be proclaymed yn the market commawndement was given to all suche as fownde them self grevyd yn that behalfe shulde resorte to hym & he wolde se reformacyon.

Bothe apon the chyrche halyday & allso apon allhallowday the Mayre wente a processyon wythe the waytes playnge before hym.

8 Oct. Apon s. denys eve was ther a greate cumpany of lawyars a ȝettynge which came to ye quenes college & to dyuers other howses yn the nyght abowte x of ye clocke makyng a proclamacyon at euery gate after thys fassyon howe yese how yese take hede whome ye make yowre proctor for fere of that that shall cum after, yf ye do standysshe wrong loke ye make ye stronge etc. that same nyght Mr Goldston of peterhowse for feare lope ouer the college walle & so ranne to trumpington but ther he was more feared by reason of a howse that was a fyre that same tyme for he thowght when he harde the noyse the cuntry had rysan to destroye ye vnyuersitye.

The nexte nyght after thei came agayne to euery howse with a greater cumpany by estymacyon there was iij or iiij. score knockynge lykewyse at ye vycech. gate byddynge them cum owte knauys cowardes & herytykes werapon ye cumpany drove them away with stones & thei cryed fyer to fyre ye gates & that nyght thei callyd a congregatyon on this maner congregatio regentium tantum in scolis publicis cum gladiis et fustibus etc. that nyght allso betwen vij & viij they got Mr Palley of christes College owte of ye howse by a trayne & so bette hym sore & also polde of hys here & ye morow after at viij of ye clocke doctors Masters princypalles or presydentes assembled at ye vyc. comawndment and thei determyned that euery presydent shuld be redy with a certayne man apoy[n]ted yf thei were sent for yn ye time of ye electyon of ye proctors & ye principalles were commawnded to go home & pacyfye ther cumpany & charge them that thai shuld make no busynes in ye lectyon tyme & so yt was don.

doctors to s. Mary chyrche to messe & after ye messe to ye scolys to rede 10 Oct.
ther ordynary & att ix aclocke agayne ther ys a messe de spiritu sancto yn s. Mary chyrche allso & after that strayght to ye scholys to ye electyon of ye proctors withowte eny congregatyon callyd before or contynued from the chyrche. the vycechaunceler declarythe no cawse but the proctor senior rede ij statutes concernynge ye proctors electyon & that day ye olde proctors geue ouer ther offyce delyuerynge ther bookes yn to the vych. handes syttynge yn ye chayre, that day ye Master of ye glomery & ij. ye yongest regentes or elles ye yongest non regente yf ther be no Master of ye glomery procede to ye electyon: the senyor taxar mynystrynge vnto them an othe that they shall dylygently & feyghtfully do that thynge that belongethe to ye scruityny & that thai shuld pronounce hym electe in quem maior pars regentium tantum consenserit, & ye senyor shall fyrst be chosen & take hys othe of ye vyc. ch. & receyveth ye booke, & then they procede to ye electyon of ye Junior yn lyke maner ye oldest of ye necessaryes doth rede ye voyces & pronowncethe them & ye M. of ye glomery pronowncethe hym that ys elected with his cappe on.

The nexte day after at viij aclocke we must warne all doctors of all facultyes relygyows & other & Masters or presydentes of euery howse to assemble yn the scholys to sett vppe the taxars byllynge one two or three of euery place among ye which ye forsayde doctors etc. do sett vppe vj. by ye consente of ye more part of them. Att ix aclocke there ys a congregatyon of bothe howses for ye electyon both of taxars & scrutytors the taxars be chosen per regentes in artibus tantum existentibus in scrutinio solummodo vicecancellario et duobus procuratoribus nouis, and yn that tyme ij. of ye oldest doctors non regentes do make ye scrutyny for ye scrutytors & procede to the electyon of them takynge an othe of the vycech. fyrst, & presentyng ther names that be electe after ye lectyon ys don vnto ye vycech. allso. & that same day ye proctors made ther first ij. owres before nyght. M^r sherewood hadde a pye & a quarte of Mawmesy sente hym when he sente for hytt. I had nothyng but thai shewed me afterwarde yt was but forgotten ye scrutytors wer chosen at ye fyrst scrutyney ye eldest doctor of the ij. dothe pronownce them that be electe with hys cappe vnder this forme. In dei nomine Amen. Ego etc. eligo et electum pronunci[o] etc.

The day of ye taxars electyon was but one taxar chosen & yet was ther v or vj scrutyneys wherefore ye congregatyon was contynued vntyll the next day after the dyryge at ij of ye clock what tyme Master Atkynson was chosen at the fyrst scrutyney that don bothe the scrutytors & ye taxars tooke ther othes of the vyc. which immedyattly after delyuerd the keys of ye common huche & the seale of offyce ynto ye senyor proctors handes & then came to ye chayre & standynge yn a few words gaue thankes to ye regentes that thai dyd wysafe to chose hym beyng vnworthy & exhorted them to chose another that shulde be a rightyows iudge that that wolde tenderly looke to ye common welthe & so he departyd owte of the scoles without eny bedle & ye proctors immedyatly asked a grace that M^r malet & Mr Redman myght seale ye purse whereyn were conteyned bothe ye keyes & ye seale of causes that don ye proctor sate downe & dyssoluyd the congregatyon & so ye bedelles browght them home.

13 Oct. Apon s. edwardes day ye proctors cawsed a congregatyon to be callyd agaynst iij aclocke afternoone at the which fyrst ye senyar proctor made a breefe oratyon to ye regentes & so proceded to ye electyon of the vyce chawnceler doctor Antony beynge yn ye scrutyny with the proctor ye senyer taxar mynystrynge vnto them an othe that thai shulde feyghtfully do that thynge that belonged to ye scrutyny & so doctor haynes was shortly chosen agayne beynge absente but he was sente for by and by yn ye same congregatyon vnto whome at hys cummynge ye proctor delyuerys ye seale & keyes sealyd yn a purse & streyghtway gaue hym hys othe withowte eny statute redynge which was that he shulde obserue all thynges that belonged to thoffyce of ye vycecha. & that don ye vyce. sate downe & immedyatly dyssolued ye congregatyon & wold haue had ye regentes home to drynke with hym but doctor Edmundes & buckmaster sayde yt was not ye custom.

53 a The next day after s. Edwarde wer ye letters whyche wer wryten to ye kynge ye quene & other peres of ye realme sealyd & allso M^r latimers letters conuersationis et gradus & allso twenty li taken owte by ye olde proctors & scrutytors & ye vyce. ye same day tooke hys iorney toward london for to delyuer thes letters & to sue to ye kynge for ye confyrmatyon of owre priuyleges & allso for nue grawntes.

Where as Mr Blanke beynge yongest regente dysputed betwyxte y^e commensment & the sessatyon yet he dyd dyspute agayne at ye begynnynge of ye terme after s. denys day before all his senyours notwithstondynge yt was thowght he had wronge so to doo & Mr Hobbys sayde he hadde sene the contrary often tymes & that this statute was true viz. euery necessary shulde dyspute twyse after s. dynys yf he had not dysputyd before, the vychawnceler desyryd hym to take paynes for that tyme & he wolde see an order taken that yt shall be owt of controuersye euer after.

The blacke assemblye ys after suche forme .ij or iij. dayes before ye daye of the congregatyon one of the bedelles dothe put the mayre yn remembrawnce therof that he may cawse all suche to be browgthe yn that shulde be ther sworne, & the princypalles of euery ostill shall haue warnynge by ye bedelles when they call ther cause to brynge yn euery one of them ij cunstables that yn lyke maner shall be sworne to ye conseruatyon of the peace that ys at ix of ye clock euer the fryday before symon & Jude the vycechaunc. with all ye doctors do syt apon a forme ad gradum chori & ye mayre apon the same forme on ye lyfte hande of ye vycech. all townes men besyde do stande bye & none do sytt but the iiij Baylyffes which do sytt benethe face to face to ye vyce. & ye Mayre ande the towne clarke betweene bothe formes syttythe & rehersethe ther names yn a byll that be apoynted by ye mayre & hys offycers the Mayre reasoned moche apon the charter with ye vyce. saynge that ther shuld be quinque scholares de quolibet commitatu browght yn there allso & that thei shuld swere hinc inde tam clerici quam laici and moreouer the Mayre & ye baylyffes proferryd them selfe to take an othe ther that same tyme saynge that thei were not bownde to take eny othe of ye vyce. apon Mychaelmasse day but only apon that day notwithstondynge the vyce. wold not take ther othe but sayde he wolde kepe the olde maner. & so at lenght thei procedyd to ther othes takynge, ye chawncelers bedle callyng euery man by hys name how be hyt at ye fyrst thei made resystaunce & sayde thei wold not swere excepte ye scholers layde ther handes apon the booke with them & specyally hasyll at ye bryge yn so myche that ye vyce. was feyne to commawnde hym iij tymes yn the kynge name & sayde he wolde sende hym to warde yf he wolde nott swere ye towne clarke dothe wryte a non Jur. apon ther heddes that apere not and dothe delyuer hyt to the vyce. when they haue don the Mayre & hys company wolde haue hadde suche scholers as wer browght yn by ye princypalles to ben prestes & more sage men bayly Osborne sayde that sum of ther seruantes were as honest as sum of them wer he sayde allso openly that sum ther wer that knew ye brokers of the wyndowes but thei durst not dysclose them, bothe prockters stand bareheddyd at ye backes of ye vyce. & doctors the senyor proctor dothe mynyster ther othes to them all fyrst to ye townesmen yn ynglysshe & then to the scholars yn laten but ye procktor declared hyt afterwarde yn ynglysshe at ye townesmen request. All thys don the Mayre rose & Turned hym to the prockters & delyuered them the byll of complaynte with one nue artycle as not contente with the vycech. answer desyrynge to haue an answer with expedytyon & that hyt myght be yn scriptis ye prockters receyved hyt but thei poynted no tyme of answer gyvynge but they wolde call the vnyuersyte to gyther to haue ther aduyses, It was xij aclocke that day or ye congregatyon was don.

53 b The saterday before Symon & Jude ye taxars crye was made att x of the clocke yt was fyrst proclaymed at ye bull rynge & then agayne at the pease market in presens of both proctors bothe taxars & the commyssarye ye pryncipall of burden ostell Mr Tayler & the chancelers bedle, they had warnynge by Wynteryngam & legett to meete all together yn the austen fryars, the dyner was made at Cobbys but ther was not one at dyner ther but suche as wer before rehersed, & the bedelles, ther was thys yere & tyme also proclaymed an acte for ye myllers which ys yn the senyor proctors booke.

The morow after Symon & Judes day the Mayre cawsed a proclamatyon to be made thorow the towne for the clensynge of the streetes avoydynges of hogges blockes & other anoysaunces yn the whyche proclamatyon he named hymselfe chefe lord ruler gouerner of the towne of Cambryge.

That same day was the proctors acownte gyven at xij a clocke the vycechauncelers depute beyng doctor buckmaster audytours doctor Chetworth Mr Mydylton Mr Wyett & Mr Swynborne which was absent that day the vnyuersyte Chaplen makythe hys acownte allso that day & givythe euery of the audytours a grote for ther paynes that same day had master water hys letters of lycens to preache sealyd with ye common seale at this cowne wer bothe the olde proctors & ye nue, ye olde scrutators & the nue not warned by the bedelles this yere, the supper was made at Mystres Rutlandes which was redy betwyxte iiij & v. because they wer afrayde to go home late ther supped allso doctor Ruxbye.

Thys yere allsowles day fell on the sonday & was seruyd on the munday folowynge. Wherefore the ordynary masters redde not, net withstondynge ther was a dysputacyon made by Mr Crosley of s. Jones allbeyt ther wer many reasons made to the contrarye.

The nexte fryday after hallowmesse ther was congregatio regentium et non. where doctor Buckemaster beynge the vycechauncelers depute declared the cawses of the congregatyon which wer thes. fyrst, for graces to be gotten for the oppenentes for the yere ynsuynge, then to vtter the nues conteyned yn the vycech. letters concernynge owre sutes above how gracyous bothe the kynge & the queene & other peares of the realme wer & yn especyall Mr Croomwell not only concernyng the nuly confyrmyng of owre privyleges but allso the ynlarginge of them which letters doctor Maye browght from the vycech. at london, & allso how they hadde allso gotten the copy of the townes priuyleges which wer then browght home. Another cause was to reede the lybell before them that was exhybyt by the Mayre to the hole body of the unyuersyte to haue an answere of them which lybell was ther allso openly redde. When the congregatyon was don Mr hutton gentyllman came yn to ye scoles to the vyce. to complayne of Mr wyllyamson which layde assaute & yn wayte for one barnes of Cumbarton which ther deposed apon a booke that he fered bodyly hurte wherapon the vycech. gaue comawndement to the proctors to make serche for hym that ye sayde barnes may haue the peace apon hym, which lay yn wayte at nunam the evennyng before to sle hym ynsomyche that he was fayne to tary yn Cambr. all that nyght. At that forsayde congregatyon & att Michaelhowse dyryge was no bedle present but only I. Mr sherwood was not then cum from lundon & Mr Adams has buryed one of hys howse.

that day that Clare hall dyryge was I was sente to london with ij 54 a charters & with a patente of xle by yere for Mr Cromwell, & when I cam to london ye vycechawnceler sent me downe agayne, with all speede to cawse the patente to be corrected better wryten & nue seelyd & hyt was very thankfully receavyd & I contynued at london vntyll saynte Nycholas eue. & on that day was a generall processyon & dyryge at 5 Dec.
gunvyll hall at afternoone ye same day.

The fryday before O sapientia which fell on the tuysday nexte after ther was a congregatyon specyally to put owte a dysputatyon whyche Mr Cheke shuld haue dysputed & at ye same congregatyon was greate sute made to doctor buckemaster beynge the vycechawncelers depute, to dyssolue the terme whereapon he cownsellyd the doctors & presydentes there present & they decreed that yt shuld not be dyssolved allegynge that yt shuld haue ben a very yll presydente yn tyme to cum specyally becawse the munday after was a dysputable day which shuld haue byn dyspensed withall & stande for a disputatyon & Mr Cheke shuld haue escaped hys curse.

Apon O sapientia day the Erle of sussexe lodgynge at ye Fawken 16 Dec.
was presented with a greate pyke an ele & a tenche att viij a clocke yn the mornynge the vycechawnceler goynge withall & ij or iij. other doctors & thens came to the scholys at ix of ye clocke & dyssolued the terme with owte eny masse or congregatyon callyd before & therfore ther cowde no grace be asked concernynge any forme.

Apon Candlemasse day came ther a pursyfaunte to s. Jonnes to serue 54 b
tyme beynge yn ther copys, & when they made answere that they hadde nothynge adoo with hym he delyuerde hytt to the presydente & so he serued hytt apon them. he cawsed allso a seriante & a toller to serue another apon Mr paynell yn Mychaell chyrche but he wolde nott then receave hytt but lent them a blow or ij with a processyoner that he hadde yn hys hande. He serued lykwyse wrytes apon parson dowtye & ye vykar of haslyngfylde yn the cuntrye & another was lefte to be serued apon Mr Tayler of the quenes College, he rode allso to stoke

College to serue one apon whythedde of burden ostell. The vycechaunceler sent bothe for the pursyfaunte & ye seruante & toller but nothynge he dydd vnto them saue thatt he thretned them to ponysshe them & he checked the pursyfaunte bycause he so pertly & presumptyosly he communed with the vycech. with hys cappe on hys hedde, the tener of the wrytes were that they shulde apere in crastino purificationis at westmester vnder payne of an 6th li. & ther was wrytten yn the labell, Robertus Chapman Maior et alii prosequuntur hoc breve & the morow after they all savynge Mr Tayler tooke ther iorney to london.

Apon Candlemesse day at nyghte the procters seruantes with M. Whytte gladman & ser grene wente to the Castell ende to seke a drabbe wher bayly genynges hue hare with dyuers other sett apon them with bylles stavys & flaylys & made ij or iij frayes with them so that ther was of bothe partyes hurte & on the morow after genynges & hare rode to london to complayne of the proctors & ther seruantes.

The congregatyon bothe for the chosynge of the posars & allso for the deposytyon of the bachelars was of bothe howses notwythestondynge ye statute requyrythe but of one howse Mr Redman & Mr turner were apposars Mr Redman senyor apposar deposyd for all the bachelars with a shorte oratyon & yn few wordes & ther was none reiected thys yere.

Apon shroffe tuysday at nyght ther wer xxvij or xxx getters abrode which made a proclamatyon apon the markett hyll & ther asked a banes betwyxt skneuellynge Raffe of the bell & a burnte hoor of Jesus lane & that same nyght they coursed the vycechawncelers depute d. Buckmaster yn att ye kynges hall gate & when he hadde gotten yn he shett the gate & called them knaues & they made answer that yff they had hym withowte they wolde make hym a knaue.

the thursday in clensynge weke d. Buckmaster called all doctors of the towne & Masters of colleges & pryncypalles of hostelles or ther presydentes, yn to ye regent howse & commawnded that thei shuld cum withowte eny excuse & he redde vnto them ye vycech. letter which Mr paynell & other scholers that wer fett vppe to london browght home the sonday before the contente weroff was that the kynges cown-55 a celles pleasure was that the vycech. etc. with thassystence of the Mayre shuld sytt & enquyre of the fraye & brekynge of the pease & syche as wer fownde fawty shulde be punysshed & moreouer that ther shulde a commawndemente be set vppe vnder ye seale of offyce that euery Mr presydente & princypall of hostell shulde see the pease kepte & allso see ther gates shett at a due owre for they shall answer for all ther scholers.

On the fryday yn clensynge weeke ther was callyd before ye vyce. at the kynges hall d. bayly genynges, Colyson ye keper, hue hare, christofer Cleydon, Smythe the cartar, broke the weuar & Ihon Munsey. but genynges & hare sayde they wold make no answer to the vyc. for they had made answer allredy before the kynges cownsell & Colyson demawnded whether they wer called as partyes or as wyttnes, yf as wyttnes he sayde answer was & shulde be made before a better man & hygher Iudge, yf as partyes they wolde make answer before ther owne hedde & so he sayde the Mayre cowncelled hym to say ye vyce. wolde haue referred them an othe that they shulde make true answer vnto suche interrogatoryes & shulde be obiected vnto them to bulte owte the truthe of thys matter & they vtterly refusyd hytt the rest tooke othes & so dyd bothe the proctors seruantes & they secretly wer examyned euery man by hym selfe Edmunde clyfton beynge notary & scrybe this don genynges with hys company made stypulatyon vnto ye vyce. to apere agayne when so euer they shulde be sent for. In the tyme of examynatyon the vycech. sent M^r^ wylkes proctor, M. Cartar & me to the Mayre which was then yn the gylde hall syttyng with certayne of hys aldermen & the baylyffes & he made vs a[n]swer not very dyrectly to owr comawnde, & sayde yt was the duke of norfolkes pleasure that they shuld be punysshed by ye scholers, & that he as well as ye vyce. shuld syt with ye vyce. of ynquirye of ye mater & moreouer that suche as were hys subiectes he wolde ponysshe but he sayde yt was manyfest & euydent ynowghe that ther was none gylty yn thys mater but only the scholers & he sayde that yt was a ryatt wher the proctors seruantes came yn to hares howse after such demand, and fynally as towchynge owre demawnde he sayde that as partyes they shulde not answer befor ye vycech. and allso he sayde that he wolde complayne farther yn thes matters with many other hawnte wordes.

That same nyght was parson yaxley drynkynge at ye angell vntyll ix aclocke & yn goynge from thens to the dowlphyn abowte the backe dore of burden ostell he lost hys gowne & hys typett. And the nexte nyght after ther was strypes geven betwyxte Mr Alyson of the kynges hall & symson & eyther hurte the other with daggars very sore.

The saterday yn clensynge weeke M. Mayre cawsed the statute of araye to be proclaymed openly yn the Markett he hym selfe with dyuers of hys bretherne standynge ther all the [time] of proclamatyon, the morow after the warden of the grey fryars bachelar dysse, preched & after the prayers he was so abasshed & astonned that he cowde nether say hyt by harte nor rede hytt on hys paper & so he was fayne to cum downe ye pulpett with thys protestatyon, that he was neuer yn that takynge before but as now he was yntangled with worldly busynes concernynge ye howse & for that he gave not so great dylygens as became hym for to doo.

The munday yn the fyrst weeke of clene lent bayly haryson was 55 b conuentyd before ye vycechawnceler for brekynge thassyse of breade lymytted vnto them by the taxtars & he made answer with an hawnte cowntynawnce saynge to M. vyce. after this maner. I had leuer & xx^li^ that ye wold other sett me on the pyllary or commytte me to warde for this matter.

The wendysay after the Mayre callyd all the forrens of the towne of cambryge before hym yn the gyld hall many scholers allso wer warned (but dyuers of them wold not go & so ye vycechawnc. cowncellyd them as Mr Ayegton, Brassey old wollwarde etc.) & deferred euery man an othe that thei shuld be true to god & the kynge & to obey the Mayre & hys offycers yn those thynges as wer lawfull & good & he poynted them a day at which thei shuld declare them selfes other to be fremen or scholers & did exhorte them to becum freemen & they shuld be hartely wellcum affyrmynge that they had as good a corporatyon as london had eny & moreouer he gaue them comawndment that they shuld not be owt of ther howse after a due owre nor suffer ther seruawntes so for to be but that they shuld with all dylygens se the kynges pease kepte and avoyde thoccasyon of breche of the same.

On the morow after M. bracken with other townes men as hobbye & hue Cowpar etc. came to ye vyce. to complayne of Mystresse walker bryngynge her breade with them & wayed hytt before the vyce. & of a truthe yt was fownde lackynge vij & v. vnces of ye full syese & for that thei sayde the taxtars gave the scholers one syese & the freemen another but yn the meane tyme whyle they wer with the vyce. the taxars came yn with Mystres walkares breade to complayne of her & they yntended to haue convented her before that tyme but they cowde not gett her.

The saterday yn the same weeke yn the regente howse was at x of ye clocke which was immedyatly after a dyrige masse, was thellectyon of a nu reder yn dyuynyte which was proclaymed yn the scholes iij. dayes before to be at that tyme & place fyrst was mynystred vnto them the othe to chose a fytte man, by d. Buckmaster, vyce. depute & reder at that tyme, & yn the hedde wer d. whytte & d. Bucknam thone as vyce. & thother as oldest doctor & allso M. Myddelton as o[l]dest bachelar yn dyuynyte & fyrst they wrote ther owne voyces euery one yn a sondry pease of paper & then lykewyse euery one besyde gave vppe ther voyces ynto ye hedde wryten with ther owne handes & so doctor buckmaster was chosen vnanimi consensu & so pubblysshed by ye oldest doctor that don doctor buckmaster redde ouer the fowndatyon immedyatly from the begynnynge to thendynge the voyces be gaven from ye yongest bacheler to theldest doctor ther wer not past xi or xij voyces given at that electyon.

That same nyght abowte vj of the clocke the vyce etc. went to ye Judge my lorde lyxter & fow[n]de ye Mayre & hys bretheren with hym at the dowphyn, & the Judge desyryd the vyce. to go before yn to ye fryers & he wold com after & common with him & so came with yn hawlfe an owre & so thei commonned to gether vntyll yt was past viij of ye clock.
